NIGHTINGALE IS AFTER JUSTICE C. H. BANKS

Fred Nightingale is suing C. H. Banks, a justice of the peace at Murray, in the Third district court to prohibit him from assuming jurisdiction in the case of Janet Miller, administratrix of the M. M. Miller estate, to recover $127.79 alleged to be due her from Nightingale. Nightingale says he is a resident of Salt Lake City and sets up lack of jurisdiction on Justice Banks' court as a defense.

up lack of jurisdiction on Justice Banks' court as a defense.

The action originally was brought before Justice of the Peace Charles F. Durand at Murray September 4, 1906, through the Luke Collection agency. Nightingale said he picaded lack of jurisdiction for the reason that he resided in this city and asked the dismissal of the action, but Durand went abead and arbitrarily rendered judgment against him without his notice.

Justice Banks is now attempting to enforce the judgment, Nightingale says, although without authority, and he wants the Third district court to restrain him from doing so. strain him from doing so.
